CONFERENCE IS TO BE HELD AT JUAREZ THIS WEEK.

U. S. ARMY IS ACTIVE

FORCES WILL REMAIN IN MEXICO UNTIL FURTHER ORDER.

EL PASO, Texas, April 25.—General Alvaro Obregon, minister of war of the Mexico de facto government departed from San Luis Potosi today for Juarez for his conference with General Scott and Funston of the United States army according to a despatch received from him today by General Gavira, commander of the Juarez garrison.

SAN ANTONIO, Texas, April 25.—General Funston will accompany General Hugh L. Scott to the conference with General Alvaro Obregon, Carranza minister of war, it was announced at department headquarters today.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—Official attention today was focused on a conference regarding the Mexican situation to be held within the next few days probably at Juarez between Major General Scott, chief of staff of the United States army and General Alvaro Obregon, minister of war of the de facto government of Mexico. Upon its outcome probably will depend further steps in the pursuit of Villa and the relations of the American and Mexican governments.

Arrangements for the meeting between the two men were made yesterday immediately after Eliseo Arredondo, Mexican ambassador designate, had notified Secretary Lansing that General Carranza had agreed to a conference.

General Obregon is said to be en route north from Mexico City. General Scott is regarded as well qualified for the task to which he has been assigned. He is fully acquainted with the views and attitude of the administration regarding the whole Mexican problem.

Pending the outcome of the conference General Funston will put in to effect plans for the redistribution of the American troops in Mexico so as to safeguard the position of his forces.

AMERICAN FORCES ACTIVE

Pershing's Men Scouring Mountains in Parral District for Bandits.

COLUMBUS, N. W., April 25.—Activities were resumed by the American expeditionary command in Mexico, according to reports reaching here today. The movements in the main, it was stated, have been only those necessary to keep the line of communication intact. It was said also, however, that while most of General J. J. Pershing's advanced detachments have been drawn back to the main columns some of them are scouring the mountains north and west of Parral, particularly in an attempt to run down a clue that Villa is in hiding in the vicinity of Nonoava.

A quantity of detachable railroad wheels, which can be fitted over the rubber tires of a motor truck arrived here today. It is planned to equip some of the truck trains operating from here with these wheels for experimental purposes and if they are proved practical to convert the various trucks into locomotives for use on railroads where possible.

A belief is general here among military men that the proposal to withdraw the American forces to the district north of Casas Grandes 120 miles south of the border, will not be carried out. It was asserted that such action could afford the American government no assurance that the troops of the de facto government are capable of protecting the border after complete withdrawal from Mexican forays.

It was learned upon reliable authority that until new developments warrant a change in plans no further troops will be sent into Mexico, General Pershing now being regarded as ample to cope with the situation.

TELEGRAPH TIPS

MARSEILLES, France, April 25.—Another contingent of Russian troops arrived here this morning. The first force of Russians arrived at Marseilles on Thursday of last week and on Saturday passed through Lyons on the way northward, presumably for service with the French troops to the front. The number of men in the expedition was not disclosed, although the Russian contingent was described as a strong force.

BUTTE, Mont.—Selection of J. Bruce Kramer, democratic national committeeman from Montana, as secretary of the National Democratic committee has been made, according to advices made public here. COLUMBUS.—On re-hearing today, the supreme court allowed to stand a judgment of $24,000 given last fall to the city of Cleveland against W. J. Gawne, the contractor for the East Side Water Works Tunnel. Gawne had tried to reduce the judgment by $150,000. VOTE ON BONDS LIGHT BECAUSE OF LEADEN SKY

Small Percent of the Full Strength Polled in Most Wards.

BACKERS ARE BUSY

No Interest Shown in Presidential and Delegate Tickets.

[By David W. Bowman.]

Election returns will be received tonight at the council chamber, and all citizens interested in the bond issues are invited to attend.

If the bond issues submitted to the electorate today failed to get a large vote it was not because of lack of enterprise of the part of those who have undertaken to engineer the campaign in behalf of the improvement program. Methods familiar in past political campaigns and organized electioneering machinery have been applied with veteran campaigners on the job.

Early in the day it became evident that the vote would probably be a light one. The absence of acrimonious contests in the primary and the threatening appearance of the skies kept the stay-at-home vote large, as it usually is in the case of such primary elections. Public interest was not believed to be keen enough to compel anything like a full vote, and measures were at once undertaken to get out the favorable voters by force of arms if necessary.

Automobiles were employed to carry to the polls those who would otherwise have overlooked the privilege of the franchise. While the corrupt practices of the past in the case of primaries and candidates, there is no provision covering bond issue elections, as no candidates enter into the contest for "gainful pursuits." Paid workers, one to each precinct, were employed, old hands from the local party organizations offering their services. Many were content to electioneer for nothing, but donations from public-spirited citizens enabled the committee to recompense all workers for their work. The law permits the use of one man to each precinct to distribute literature.

Factories permitted their employees to leave early for the purpose of voting, although a few of them overlooked the provision. Most of the great industrial plants encouraged their workmen to vote during the noon hour. Thousands of sample ballots were scattered about the outlying residence districts, especially in the vicinity of factories, and precautions were taken to prevent voters from ignoring the bond issue when voting on the presidential preference proposition.

At no time during the campaign for the bond issues could it be said that improper methods or motives entered into the fight, although the efforts of "Jack" Ward were scattered widespread throughout the south and east sides of Lima. As is often the case, the circular printed at his behest reacted in favor of the issue attacked, and more votes were made for the improvement program by the attack than by any other means.

Interest in the primary proper was at low ebb today. A small minority of the republican politicians were engaged in spreading the "stand-pat" gospel, urging voters to back the hand-picked Burton slate, Willis Harding, Sullivan and Procter. A few democrats devoted spare moments advising republicans to uphold Giffin, Glaser and Tyler, and anti-slate candidate. In the district delegation, too, the party faced a contest, with Herbert Mong and Woods running for two places on the delegation to Chicago. While the organization backed the first and the Funeral services for Conrad Tripplehorn, 73 years old, father of Attorney Daniel R. Tripplehorn, of the firm of Hughes and Tripplehorn, were held this forenoon at 10 o'clock at the Mennonite church in Bluffton. The services were largely attended, due to the large acquaintanceship of Mr. Tripplehorn over that part of the county.

A year ago he suffered the amputation of a limb and gangrene resulted. Death followed as the result of a spread of this disease through the system.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel R. Tripplehorn were in Bluffton today to attend the funeral.

Reports Strong Influences at Berlin Urge German Back Down.

WASHINGTON, April 25.—The documents seized by federal agents when they raided the offices of Wolfe Von Igel gained new importance today through an announcement that among them was a German code-book. This code, it is said, unlocked valuable information, since many of the Von Igel papers are in cipher. The documents are now in the keeping of the department of justice in Washington.

Evidence received by the federal grand jury investigating the alleged plot to destroy the Welland canal, convinced the United States district attorney today that the government can legally deny the demand of the German ambassador for the return of these papers. Arthur A. Hassell, a real estate man who was a witness yesterday declared that when Von Igel leased his office here on June 24, 1915, he made affidavit that the rooms were to be used by him "as an advertising agent and for no other purpose."

This evidence the grand jury holds, refutes the claim of Ambassador Von Bernstorff that when federal agents raided the rooms and arrested Von Igel they violated an office of the German embassy.

A report from Ambassador Gerard at Berlin outlining the results of his long conference yesterday with Dr. Von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German chancellor, over the American note, was expected at the state department today.

It was anticipated the ambassador would shed further light on the attitude of the German government regarding American demands in the submarine controversy.

Mr. Gerard is understood to have already reported strong political influences are at work in Germany to prevent a rupture between the two nations.

Labor leaders and socialists were represented as being particularly adverse to a severance of diplomatic relations. The ambassador is said also to have reported that there were strong indications of German willingness to make some concessions. Whether these concessions will be broad enough to meet the American demands is problematical.

The fact that the ambassador and the chancellor conferred at some length was pointed to here as a hopeful sign. If Germany was not disposed to meet the demands of the United States it was believed that there would have been no lengthy discussion.

Paris Reports Forcing Back Three German Advances On Verdun Front In Two Days

LONDON, April 25.—Agustine Birrell, chief secretary for Ireland, announced in the house of commons today that grave disturbances broke out in Dublin yesterday. He added that troops had been sent to the Irish capital and that the situation was now well in hand, although as communication still was exceedingly difficult he was not able to give any further particulars. But the house, he continued, might take it from him that the situation was well in hand.

The chief secretary for Ireland stated that persons had been arrested, but that could not give any names. Speaking from the information he had received he could say that twelve lives had been lost. Communication from Dublin, he said, still was very difficult.

At 7 o'clock last night Mr. Birrell said four or five different parts of Dublin were in possession of the rebels but he said they did not control the whole place.

A German cruiser squadron raided Lowestoft, on the English east coast this morning. The warships remained in the vicinity for about twenty minutes getting away clear after bombarding the shore and landing hits on two British light cruisers and a destroyer which engaged them.

SIR ROGER CASEMENT PRISONER IN LONDON

Captured in Attempt to Land German Arms in Ireland.

LONDON, April 25.—It is announced officially that Sir Roger Casement was brought to London on Sunday for trial. The announcement follows: "Sir Roger Casement, who was arrested in connection with an abortive attempt to land arms in Ireland from a German vessel, was brought to London on Sunday morning. He was met at Euston by Scotland Yard officials and is now detained in military custody. It is understood evidence of his proceedings in Germany since the outbreak of the war will be produced at his trial."

Owing probably to the rigid censorship only the bare facts in connection with the arrest of Sir Roger Casement and the present situation in Ireland have been made public. It was announced officially last night that an attempt was made last week to land arms and ammunition in Ireland from a German auxiliary under the guise of a neutral merchantship in conjunction with a German submarine. The auxiliary was sunk and a number of prisoners, including Sir Roger, were made.

Sir Roger, who was leader of the Separatist faction in Ireland, went to Berlin after the outbreak of the war with the intention it is said, to open negotiations between the German government and the anti-English party in Ireland.

HEAD THEM OFF, SOMEBODY.

CINCINNATI, O., April 25.—The police were asked to try to put an end to a long trip by wagon that is being made by Tillman Temple, 15 and his brother George from Nashville, Tenn. The two boys left their home town last Wednesday and started for Detroit in a wagon intending to see the country as they drove north. Chief Copelan was asked in a letter by Chief A. J. Bath of Nashville to try to head off the boys if they reached Ohio.

DEMAND CLOSED SHOP.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 25.—Two hundred employees of the Automatic Sprinkler company walked out on a strike. They demanded eight hours work, with nine hours pay, increased wages and a closed shop. The company refuses to treat with the men except as individuals.

GERMAN CRUISERS REPELLED

Squadron Attacks English Coast at Lowestoft, 4 Civilians Killed.

LONDON, April 25.—German battle cruiser appeared off Lowestoft today. Local naval forces engaged the raiders and also British light cruisers. The German warships retreated in twenty minutes. The German warships opened fire on the coast before departing. Two men, one woman and a child were killed. The material damage apparently was small.

In the engagement two British light cruisers and a destroyer were hit, but none of them was sunk. The following official announcement was made:

"At about 4:30 o'clock this morning the German cruiser squadron, accompanied by light cruisers and destroyers, appeared off Lowestoft. The local naval forces engaged it and in about 20 minutes it returned to Germany, chased by our light cruisers and destroyers.

"On shore two men, one woman and a child were killed. The material damage seems to have been insignificant so far as is known at present. Two British light cruisers and a destroyer were hit but none was sunk.

Lowestoft is on the North sea coast about 100 miles to the northeast of London. It is almost opposite The Hague.

On previous occasions attacks have been made on the English coast during the war by German warships. The most important raid was made December 16, 1914. The towns of Scarborough, Whitby and Hartlepool, about 150 miles north of Lowestoft, were bombarded and about 130 persons were killed. Aided by fog the German vessels escaped.

On January 24, 1915, a further attempt of the kind was made but the German squadron was met off Dogger Bank by the British battle cruiser squadron under Vice Admiral Sir David Beatty. On being sighted their rear ship, the Bluecher, was sunk and two other cruisers were set on fire and damaged severely. The British flagship Lion was disabled by a shot in one of her feed tanks and was towed home.

The first German naval raid on the British coast was made on November 3, 1914. Three battle cruisers Selditz, Moltke and Von der Tann, the armored cruisers Bluecher and York and the protected cruisers Kolberg, Graudenz and Strassburg, left port on the evening of November 2, and at dawn appeared off Yarmouth. They bombarded Yarmouth and Lowestoft for about 20 minutes and then returned. A British submarine—the D-5, attempted to pursue the Germans but struck a mine and sank.

The York also struck a mine and went down with 300 men.

The raid on Hartlepool, Scarborough and Whitby was the most important of these ventures. The German cruisers poured a half of shells into the towns for an hour and a half and in addition to the large number killed 300 or more persons were wounded. News of the raid produced the greatest excitement in England, where it was thought for a time that an attempt at an invasion of the country might be under way. Lowestoft now ranked for the second time by warships is the most easterly town in England, an important fishing station and a fashionable seashore resort. Its population is about thirty thousand. This town has been attacked on several occasions by German aircraft.

last named, there is no reason to doubt that Mong received a large vote because his name precedes that of Woods. Again, the latter's name on the ticket is written "W. W. Woods 3rd," and with many men the "3rd" appendix smacks of wrist-watches and hair parted in the middle, to say nothing of Mayflower aristocracy.

On the democratic side of the fence the chief interest was to prevent any votes going to Frank S. Monnett, former attorney general whose connection to anti-neutrality conspiracies at Hoboken brought him a federal grilling. He is openly anti-Wilson, and on the ticket he gives his first choice as former governor James E. Campbell. There is also an alternate in the district delegation, growing from a factional feud in Darke county. The candidates on the ballot are A. E. Binkley, Dr. Galtor Jennings and Ira McGriff, the first and last named hailing from the above-mentioned county. The hope which came up from the lower end of the district by special courier Sunday was to vote the first two through, but very few paid any attention to the instructions, although the chances are that that was the way they voted.

This is a characteristic of the primary which has made it unpopular with many political observers. Where there appears a string of names with none of which the voter is familiar, many there are to elect and vote for those whose names lead the list. How else could "Jack" Arnold have become the republican nominee for Lieutenant-Governor two years ago? Nobody ever heard of him before, but his name begins with "A."

In the county tickets there was even less interest than in the state tickets. The republican central committee has split up the county into thirteen districts and apportioned them out for one candidate for delegate and one for alternate to each district. This was an extra-local plan, adopted for convenience and not mentioned by law, and any candidate could have contested it, demanding that the entire county vote on the list as a whole. There were but a few contests and none of them lively. The democrats had no contests and still the delegation represents the entire county geographically.

AGED NEWSPAPER MAN DIES.

SPRINGFIELD, O., April 25.—George W. Hastings, aged 89 years, former newspaper man, died this morning from the infirmities of age. He started a paper in Springfield in 1853, known as the Nonpareil. This was absorbed by other papers, he retaining his connection with some of them. The final outgrowth of his paper finally resulted in the Daily News. He was forced to retire a number of years ago on account of failing sight.

BUSINESS WOMEN'S CLUB PURCHASES J. D. S. NEELY HOME

Will Remodel Place to Suit Needs of Institution Member

Moose Home on W. North Street Will be Occupied Temporarily.

The Business Woman's club late yesterday concluded a deal, whereby that organization comes into possession of the J. D. S. Neely residence at 626 West Spring street, to be used as their permanent home. The price paid for the same was $22,000. The original location and building at 497 West Market street, was sold a couple of weeks ago for $20,000. The building will be moved from the lot this week and a garage will be constructed.

The club is temporarily occupying the Moose home, the old D. J. O'Day property on West North street. Within two months they will take charge of the Neely property and occupy the same. The court of common pleas this morning granted the sale of the old club-house and lot, located on West Market street.

Miss Eda M. Ballard, president of the Business Woman's club, said this morning: "The purchase of the property was made, simply because it fulfilled our needs. It has fourteen large rooms, besides the laundry and some smaller rooms in the basement as well as the garage. The hall room located on the third floor will afford ample room for the many purposes to which the club will wish to put it. We think we secured a place to suit our needs and that we out our coat in accordance with the cloth we had at hand."

It is expected that later on a swimming pool, gymnasium and grounds will be opened in the garden, where athletic games may be pursued.

The arrangement of the residence will afford the club means of entertaining in any style in which they desire to arrange. The company of girls attending the monthly suppers can be adequately cared for and the officers of the club, feel they have done a remarkable thing for business women in securing this modern home to be used as a club-house.

Officers of the club are Miss Eda Ballard, president; Miss Alice Crabb, vice-president; Miss Ruth Parrett, secretary; Miss Mary Myers, corresponding secretary; Miss Ruth Keating, treasurer.

forthcoming conference between General Obregon, Carranza's minister of war and General Hugh L. Scott, chief of staff of the United States army.

With the American expeditionary force partly concentrated at two isolated points near Nampiquipa and at Colonia Dublan, where it is marking time pending the diplomatic exchanges between Washington and General Carranza, the pursuit of Villa has ceased to be a main factor.

El Paso has already been the scene of several Mexican-American conferences notably those of former President Taft and Porfirio Diaz, General Obregon and Pershing, and General Scott and Francisco Villa. Men versed in Mexican affairs believe that the coming meeting will be of far more importance than any that have preceded it. It is only eleven months ago that General Scott came to this city to meet Villa, now a fugitive bandit, then the possible "coming man" of Mexico.

With Obregon he will meet a very different type of man, according to those here who know Carranza's minister of war.

Obregon is described as one of the ablest men in Mexico. He is said to be an accomplished diplomatist with a real grasp of international affairs. His reputation as a soldier is high and he is credited by his friends, among whom are many Americans with being very influential in the affairs of the de facto government.

It is not expected here that the conference can take place before a week at least. In normal times it took more than three days to make the trip from Mexico City to Juarez and no such time can be made under existing conditions. The Mexican Central railroad which runs direct from the capital to Juarez has been completely wrecked between Aguascalientes and Torreon where the central road can again be used. This means a trip of anywhere from five to eight days.

Every report from the interior during the last few days indicates that all quiet prevails in the territory through which the American troops are strung. The Mexicans, like the Americans, appear to be waiting for the outcome of the diplomatic negotiations. As far as the Mexican officials in Juarez are concerned, while they are obviously impatient for the withdrawal of the American forces, they preserve the same courtesy towards Americans as has characterized their attitude since the United States soldiers crossed the border. At the same time they are emphatic in their opinion that delay in the recall of the expedition intensifies what is admittedly a very delicate situation.

Americans arriving here from the Parral district attribute the recent attack on American soldiers of Parral to the desire of a Mexican girl for revenge on Mayor Jose Delius Herrera, son of Mayor Herrera, more than a year ago. Since then she is said to have nursed the idea of revenge against the Herrera family.

When the American troops appeared in Parral her chance came. She is said to have appeared in the plaza and to have incited the Mexicans to make the attack on the "Gringos."

According to the story told here the girl carried a rifle and herself fired on the retreating khaki-clad troopers.

THE IDLER

Superintendent Clarke of the Lima Insane institution, yesterday entertained State Horticulturist Moore, who made an inspection of the grounds of the hospital. He complimented the head of the institution on the manner in which the land is being utilized for gardening purposes.

Criminal Court Clerk Wingate sold 118 dog tags yesterday and there is a possibility of the rush continuing for several days as indicated by the number of licenses sold this morning. This action is a result of the edict of Police Chief McKinney in regard to killing dogs not tagged.

Cal Black, tried yesterday on a charge of non-support, was fined $10 and costs. The court ordered that he pay $2 each week toward the support of his child, and remain out of saloons.

Owing to the fact many members of the Grand Army of the Republic, will go to Columbus Thursday to see the removal of battle-scarred flags, the birthday dinner planned by women of the relief corps has been postponed, probably until Saturday. Thursday will be regular work day. Lunch will be served.

Mrs. Farmer, who was recently removed to 758 Greenlawn avenue, from Lakeview, was taken to the city hospital this forenoon, in the Eckert ambulance.

Jerry Neely, of Allentown, who fell from a hay wagon yesterday afternoon at 3 o'clock, while on North Central avenue, is recovering at Lima hospital from minor injuries sustained. He was removed to the hospital in the Williams and Davis ambulance.

County Surveyor Walter Toy stated yesterday that no attempt would be made to survey the strip of the Allentown road that passes through the lot of James Carter until after the grand jury session or unless a settlement was made with Carter by the city council. Carter was arrested last Saturday, when it is alleged that he threatened the life of the engineer.

An unknown dog yesterday presented Lincoln park in East Lima with a golden eagle. One of the requests of the person that tendered the eagle to the service department of the city was that it be placed in Lincoln park. However, if it is found inconvenient to keep the bird in that park it will be moved to Fawcett park.

Lima Lodge, No. 205, Free and Accepted Masons, will hold an all-day session on Thursday to confer the Master Mason degree on 16 candidates. Dinner will be served in the evening by women of the Order of Eastern Star.

The Woman's Foreign Missionary society of Epworth Methodist church will hold the monthly meeting Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. M. C. Howe of 906 East Elm street. Mrs. H. C. Taylor will be in charge of the program.

Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Gooding of West Market street, are the parents of a daughter, born into their home last night.

Mrs. C. S. Baxter, Lima talented vocalist, is ill at her home, suffering from a severe case of tonsillitis.

Police were informed to be on the lookout for James Mayfield, who is reported to have run away from his home in Lafayette. Parents of the lad are of the opinion that he came to Lima to visit relatives, but so far they have been unable to locate him.

NEW AUDITOR AT FINDLAY.

FINDLAY, O., April 25.—Arthur D. Fisher was appointed city auditor this morning by Mayor Totten in place of Richard O. Mungen who was removed last night. Mungen was removed on charges of gross neglect of duty preferred by Mayor Totten because of absence from the office since April 13. An examination is being made of Mungen's accounts. Mungen, who was treasurer of the Knights of the Macabees, has also been displaced and his accounts with that order are being examined.

HELP WANTED TO COUNT THE BIRDS

Department of Agriculture Wants Volunteers to Aid Annual Census.

Do you know birds? Are you up on the different kinds found in your locality and can you "spot" each representative of each species? If so, the Department of Agriculture has a job for you without salary.

The third annual bird count of the United States will be made by the bureau of biological survey of the U. S. Department of Agriculture during the breeding season in May and June. In making this survey the bureau will rely largely on persons interested in bird life who agree to act as volunteer enumerators and count the different kinds of birds found in a 40 or 80 acre farm or woodland tract near their homes. The counts thus made by unpaid observers during the last two summers have furnished the last two department valuable data on the character, number and distribution of the bird population.

This year the ornithologists of the department wish particularly to secure a large number of volunteers in the west to report on the bird life in the plains, the semiarid regions, the deserts, and the mountains in that part of the United States. Especial attention also is to be given to securing data as to the birds in the fruit districts of the Pacific coast and in the South Atlantic and Gulf states.

The information collected this year it is believed, will be of special value in enabling the department to test the effect of state and national bird laws and also in determining what relationship exists between bird life and the prevalence of locusts, grasshoppers and other insect pests in different localities.

THE NOURISHING PECAN.

Good Health The pecan is one of the very finest of nature's choice products. A pound of pecans contains more nourishment than any other known food. A pound of pecans contains as much fat as three-fourths of a pound of butter and as much starch or carbohydrates as one-fourth of a pound of bread, so a pound of pecans is the full equivalent of a pound and a half of other highly concentrated and nourishing food. In comparing total values, a pound of pecans is worth, in nutritive value, two pounds of pork chops, three pounds of salmon, two and a half pounds of turkey or five pounds of veal.

FATAL FALL.

TO GET WAGE BONUS.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., April 25.—Nine hundred employees of the Truscon Concrete Steel company will be benefited by the announcement of the company that a 10 per cent wage bonus will be granted to employees after May 1. This bonus is supplemental to a 10 per cent wage increase in January.

New Paper-Making Material.

Attention is called to the possibilities of zacaton grass in the manufacture of paper by the United States department of agriculture. Zacaton grass extends from California and Texas southward to the Argentine. The Laboratory tests of this grass conducted by the department show that it can be chemically reduced to paper stock by the soda process more easily and with less expense than is necessary to reduce poplar wood.—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

WORRIED FARMER ENDS LIFE.

WASHINGTON, C. H., Ohio, April 25.—Worry over the death, a few months ago, of two daughters in an automobile accident, was believed to have been responsible for the suicide near this city today, of Edward Pfeiffer, a wealthy farmer. While milking this morning, he became suddenly deranged. His wife and daughter became alarmed and went to a neighbor's. Soon afterwards, Pfeiffer was found where he had blown his head off with a shotgun. He was 58 years of age.

NECKLACE CENTURIES OLD IS UNEARTHED

Said to Have Been Worn by Daughter of King Sesostris.

PHILADELPHIA, Apr. 25.—Valuable archaeological specimens, ranging from the second dynasty to the Byzantine Empire (5500 B. C. to 500 A. D.), have been unearthed at Denderah, according to reports received by the University of Pennsylvania museum today by Dr. Clarence S. Fisher, director of the University's Egyptian expedition.

Dr. Fisher so far has confined his operations to the cemeteries adjacent to the ancient city. Perhaps one of the most remarkable specimens, Dr. Fisher states, is a necklace with several carnelian beads inscribed with the cartouches of Sesostris. These are said to be the first inscribed beads ever found in Egypt and are looked upon by archaeologists at the university as one of the most important discoveries in recent years.

The necklace was found on a mature woman and consists of several strands. It is believed to have been worn by a daughter of Sesostris, a great king, who was identified with a Pharaoh of the twelfth dynasty, about 3500 B. C.

Other discoveries reported by Dr. Fisher, half of which were claimed by the Egyptian government, include a lapis lazuli frog with golden eyes, numerous bronze pieces, 500 pieces of pottery and some stelae from the tombs of noted men in many ages.

These stelae were found in the interior of the tombs and contained carved illustrations from the life of the dead, with hieroglyphic inscriptions telling of their deeds. In the earliest graves, about 7,000 years old, children were found buried beside a cow or a calf, and in one instance an infant was found in a large jar together with a dog.

Among the bronzes were many mirrors found in the tombs of women, who, archaeologists say, were supposed to need this toilet accessory, even in death. In one tomb, at least 4,000 years old, was found a bunch of dates, dried up, but easily recognizable, Dr. Fisher wrote.

In the near future Dr. Fisher expects to renew his work at Memphis, where, last year, he discovered the temple of Merentah. He said the Egyptian government officials, as well as the natives, have rendered valuable assistance in the work of the expedition.

TWO WIVES PETITION COURT FOR DIVORCE

Neglect and Misdeeds Set Forth in Allegations Against Husbands.

Two wives filed suit for divorce in common pleas court in quick succession late yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Blanche E. Davis instituted action against Rimer E. Davis, to whom she was married on February 20, 1910, in Delphos. They have no children.

Habitual drunkenness since their marriage, and gross neglect of duty is charged. She says he has never provided her a house to live with him, but kept her with his relatives, and that she was ordered to leave there on February 20, 1914. Mrs. Davis alleges he has furnished her no necessary and proper clothing and has frequently threatened her with violence and bodily harm. She asks to be restored to her maiden name of Blanche E. Wright. Davis is a barber at the Phelan House in Delphos.

Mrs. Eliza E. East's second marriage to James W. East in Bellefontaine, on June 22 of last year, did not prove successful, for she says in her petition filed, that he took her son and his stepson to saloons and places of bad repute. She also makes the charge that he rented rooms and took her to a place of bad repute in Chicago, and that when she found out where they were living, she promptly forced him to move.

They lived together only until September 23, of last year, when, on account of his cruel treatment, she was compelled to leave him and perform manual labor for her support. He was arrested in Hammond, Ind., and locked up for carrying a razor, she says, with which he threatened her.

Although able to provide for her, she says he spends his earnings for intoxicating liquors and with lewd women. She asks for the restoration of her former name, Eliza E. McLaughlin. His residence is unknown.

R. W. ARGUE DIES AT HOME IN KANSAS

Telegrams received in the city last night directed to Mrs. M. S. Thompson and Mrs. George S. Vicary, of West Market street, close friends of the family, told of the death of R. W. Argue at his home in Independence, Kansas, where he was interred in large oil properties. Death came at 7 o'clock last night.

While he had not been in the best of health since leaving Lima about six years ago, it was not known to friends here that he had shown any tendency toward illness. Some time ago it was feared however, that he was developing hardening of the arteries.

He was interested to a large extent in oil properties while in Lima, in which he was very successful. The family came here from Buffalo in 1900. Their home was located on the lot where the Lima club now stands.

The widow and four children are left. They are Mrs. Mae Buckpitt, Mrs. Bennett Lies, Ethel Argue and Walter Argue, all residing in Independence.

ADMINISTRATRIX NAMED.

Mary Emma DeWeese was today appointed administratrix of the estate of Marion Ellsworth DeWeese, late of West North street, deceased. The estate is valued at $5,000 in real estate and $250 in personal property. They have a daughter and three sons.

HYDRAULIC POST HOLES.

When the street lighting department at Gladstone, Michigan, tried to dig post holes for new lamp posts they struck a quicksand-like formation where soft mud poured into the holes as quickly as they were dug. The superintendent of construction pressed the city fire department into service, and by means of a stream of water at high pressure, kept the holes washed out while the posts were being set. Posts set in this manner seem to be simply firm for their purpose.

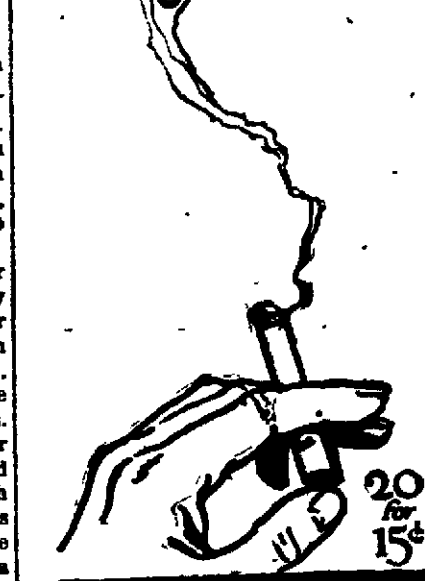

MAKES DEATH CERTAIN.

TOLEDO, O., April 25.—Clarence P. Scott, 59, drank poison and shot himself in the head this morning. After he had taken the poison, his house keeper found him writhing in pain. She ran for help. While she was gone, Scott shot himself and died instantly. Scott recently lost part of one hand in a factory accident. He had since been despondent.

FIGHT ON DOPE BEING PUSHED BY U. S. OFFICIALS

Dramatic Battles Waged With Great System of Narcotic Smuggling.

HARRISON LAW STRICT

Enforcement Supplements State Laws Restricting Sale of Drugs.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 14.—

A little more than a year has passed since the Harrison anti-narcotic law went into effect, and it is now possible in some degree to make an accounting of it. There is no doubt, but what it has been effective, and it is also certain that its success has been won at a terrific expense in pain and crime. Thousands of persons have suffered, and some of them have died, as a result of being deprived of drugs to which they had been addicted for years. A whole system of smuggling has been built up to supply their insistent demand, and with this system the federal officers have waged a dramatic battle.

The Harrison law has frequently been referred to as the most comprehensive and effective law yet devised for minimizing the traffic in drugs. It marks an epoch in the history of anti-narcotic legislation because of the fact that it provides a new and original method of controlling the manufacture, sale and use of prescribed drugs from the time they are imported until they reach the consumer. It requires everyone who handles narcotics to register, pay a tax and keep careful record of all transactions on forms sold by the government. Being itself not a regulatory nor a police measure, the federal law can not be expected to take the place of the state laws designed to restrict the sale and use of habit-forming drugs. Legislators, recognizing the limitations of the federal law, have during the past year endeavored to elaborate on the provisions of this law by the many features of drug abuse not touched by the federal law.

The day that this new law went into effect, a prominent business man asked for a prescription refilled at a Washington pharmacy. On inquiry he explained, innocently that it had been given him not by his own physician but by a physician in good standing in New York, and always cured him of the grippe. He admitted that he felt gripped very often. The clerk told him that under the new law the prescription could not be refilled as it contained heroin. It was decided to fill it without the heroin, but the effect was not as before. He longed for the drug he had become accustomed to and it took several months treatment to cure him.

This druggist was one of 48,000 who registered as the law required and whose aid was solicited in enforcing it. There were also 125,000 physicians, 37,000 dentists, 10,000 veterinarians, 3,000 hospitals and 1,100 wholesale druggists who registered under the law. The co-operation of nearly a quarter of a million persons was obtained in addition to the government officials and police whose business it was to see the law carried out.

A short time after the law went into effect, two young men slouched along one of the streets in New York's east side, whose pale faces and twitching lips showed they were in agony that comes to the drug addict when deprived of his stimulant. A strange Italian stopped them and, in broken English, explained that he had a substitute for cocaine which was twice as effective. With eager, shaking hands they counted out the price, seized the tablets offered, and crushed them on their tongues. Within ten minutes, both dropped senseless. The overdose of the powerful substitute was too much for their weak bodies. They died within the hour. During the day ten other men applied to the New York police for treatment. They said that the drug market had been cornered and only the wealthy could get a supply.

There were 1,021 drug users treated at the Metropolitan hospital, New York, during the last six months of 1915. There were 62 voluntary drug patients at Bellevue during January of this year.

The new law did from the start break up a great deal of the traffic in narcotics. But the underworld is not so easily conquered. In the large cities the "dope syndicates" have been systematically smuggling and distributing the drugs and have defied the law. In a raid in San Francisco two Chinese women were found guarding $50,000 worth of smuggled opium. It was believed to have been shipped from Mexico, dropped off steamships through port-holes by Chinese coolies at night in tin cans, picked up by the opium ring, and brought to the port in launches. It was then shipped to a depot on the waterfront, transferred to trunks and boxes and sent to headquarters. The tin cans were painted black and could not be seen floating on the waves at night. In another instance, 70 cans of opium, containing 100 five-ounce cans each, had valued at approximately $450,000.

were intercepted by customs officials. This is said to be the largest single seizure ever made in the United States.

But all of the smuggling is not through ports of entry. The organizations also work across the international boundaries. The police believe that the woman recently arrested in Detroit and known as the "Queen of the Dopes" is the head of a gigantic organization which has been bringing in immense quantities from Canada. The dope is brought in under neckties, in false cigarettes or in memo books and in numerous other ways. One hunchback who was arrested on suspicion was found not to be a hunchback at all. His hunch was to carry dope.

Difficulty is also encountered on the Mexican line. One drug store in Juarez, Mexico, was found to be shipping $200 worth of drugs into the United States every day. It has also been discovered that drugs have been mailed into the United States in the folds of foreign newspapers.

The authorities have also been successful in detecting some of the distributing organizations. Detectives concealed themselves in the "house of a thousand dreams," a flat in Minneapolis, and awaited the "finger nail rap" which is the password of the whole dope-consuming and dope-dispensing fraternity. The seized drugs, valued at $1,200, had been stolen from a wholesale drug house, and it is believed that the flat had been used as a regular headquarters for dispensing them to addicts who called there.

Some of the hardest organizations to fight are those in the prisons. One keeper carried the dope to those behind the bars in his artificial eye. About a half dozen keepers at the Tombs reported seeing sensible prisoners eating a portion of shirt front or chewing a cuff. The investigation which followed showed that dope was used in the starching solution in the prison laundry, and the prisoners had been informed by means of the usual "underground telegraph."

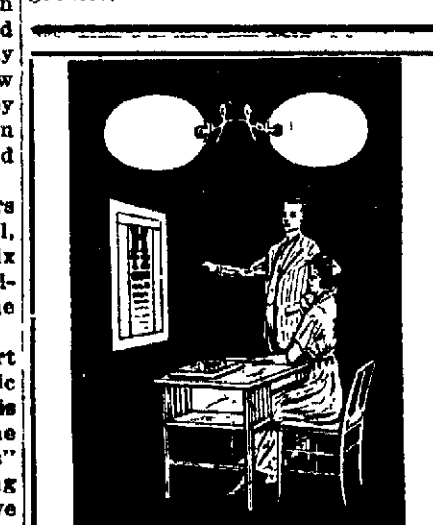

Visits from limousines bearing well-dressed women resulted in a raid on a Chinese laundry. Detectives entered the store carrying a bundle of clothes. They caught a whiff of opium fumes and rushing to the rear of the place, burst open a door and found one of the most elaborate smoking layouts that has ever been seen in this country. In another raid on a dentist's office, a dope cabinet was found in the seat of the operating chair. When the patient sat in the chair he got a filling of dope. These cases are typical of what the revenue men contend with. There have been 325 convictions and about 220 sentences imposed. There were also a number of cases which were dropped upon recommendation of the United States attorneys because they were covered by the state laws.

It is therefore evident that under the Harrison law the traffic in habit-forming drugs is being effectually regulated, and many habits have been compelled to apply to hospitals and other institutions for treatment. But the law is not perfect nor is it claimed to be. The old argument has been advanced that the law interferes with personal liberty. Some doctors have objected to being tagged like automobiles. Others would make the law more rigid and wipe out all exemptions. It is probable, however, that the effects of the law will be studied for another year at least before any change is made in it.

While it is not a matter of particular consequence to those persons who favor regulatory acts intended to check the use of injurious commodities among the ignorant and the vicious, it is interesting to note that as a revenue act the law promises to be successful. The receipts for the first year will approximate $500,000. The total amount appropriated was $442,000. It will thus be seen that the law will be more than self sustaining, while it has certainly gone a long way toward stamping out one of the most dangerous vices.

MANILA MUNICIPAL CAMPAIGN IS LIVELY

Natives Are Taking New Interest in Local Political Affairs.

MANILA, P. I., April 25.—The municipal government of Manila will undergo a radical change as a result of the city elections which will be held June 6, interest in which has already developed so far that there are 75 candidates for the ten positions of members of the municipal board, which is to be elected. While heretofore the general mass of the Filipino people have paid little heed to elections, each year has shown a growing interest, and the coming local contest will be one of the most exciting political campaigns that the city has known since the American occupation.

The new city charter passed by the legislature at its last session calls for the election of a municipal board of ten members. Heretofore this board, which has consisted of six members, has had only two direct representatives of the people, the alcade or mayor, appointed by the governor general, two other members appointed by the chief executive and the city engineer as a member ex-officio. The new charter requires the election of all members, not by districts, but by the city at large. In addition to the board, but not a member of it, there will be an alcade, appointed by the governor general, and his office will closely resemble that of the mayor of the average American city.

Some of the numerous candidates for places on the board are men who have mingled in the political game here since the first days of American occupation, but there are many newcomers, with new ideas and ideals of political service. In some respects the election will mark a battle between the old and the new, a struggle between the generation which has ruled Filipino politics for many years, and the generation which has barely come to maturity, the youth of the country.

ONLY THE START

Today the first of a series of political events of more than usual interest was considered by the voters. It uncorked a bottle of politics which will not be exhausted until November 7, and the electorate might well adopt an attitude of resignation, for this is to be a red-hot summer if there ever was one.

From now on the interest will center in the two national conventions, scheduled for June. The Republicans meet on the sixth, and the Democrats eight days later. The G. O. P. state convention is to take place on the first, the Democratic gathering on the sixth, but state conventions are no longer important in Ohio because of the primary law.

On the eighth of June candidates for state, congressional, judicial and county offices will file petitions, and sixty days are allotted for the campaign, the primary coming on August 8. The nominees selected on that date will go before the voters for election November 7.

With Roosevelt a probable bolter if not nominated and a presidential campaign based on foreign policies growing out of the European war and the Mexican question, can there be any doubt that the summer of 1916 will find the United States more agitated over politics than in any campaign of more than a score of years?

This is no year for narrowness. The coming summer can not be a season of more political elucubrancy and deal-making. The issues are too great. The popular control of elections is more apparent than ever before. The influence of the individual voter is far greater than at any previous time. What then remains for the voter to do?

A patriotic American will study the issues with the zeal of a seer. He will examine the record of every candidate. He will make it a point to know just who backs each aspirant and on what platform he seeks preferment. He will familiarize himself with the motives and aims of all who offer their services to the public. He can do no less and still be a truly intelligent voter.

Forces never before employed will bear on the election campaign of 1916. Men who might have "gotten by" in previous fights will be subjected to the searchlight of pitiless publicity, and those who would hold office must tell who they are, what they believe and by whom they are backed. That is demanded under the new order of conducting political campaigns.

This hits all candidates, national, state, congressional and county, and is equally true of all parties. Personalities should not be considered where principles are involved. The issues of the election may be subjected to distortion, but the means of obtaining truth are more adequate than before. For campaign contributions must be announced and their disposal recorded for public examination. Ohio is by no means the only state in which new laws obtain, and with public interest at white heat, every candidate must come before the public with his record clean if he hopes to succeed.

In such a state of affairs the duty of the voter becomes apparent. He has been granted greater participation in politics and his privileges are less restricted. He has more chances to express his will. But the duties have multiplied with the rights, and for every advantage there is an obligation. If the voter is allowed to take a more active part in the affairs of his party, he must do so in order to keep posted and act intelligently.

Truly the new order gives much, but it demands quite the same. He who would do well with what he has gained must use it. To ignore the duties of citizenship is to bury the talent in a napkin in the ground. Only the voter who stays awake is valuable to the community.

THE COST OF COURTSHIP

It hasn't been a great many years since a young couple could "go together" for several years with no great financial cost to the ardent swain. Pleasure was cheap and social functions plain but enjoyable. A buggy ride out along the river road several nights a week, a call or two every week during cold weather, an occasional dance and a trip to the opera house to see a hapn actor or a fourth rate troupe, were about all that Hannah ever demanded of Ezra.

Today the man who would "show her a good time" finds that he must forego the food habit or pass up clothes if he wants to save anything. Every dance now costs five to ten times what it did 15 or 20 years ago. Failure to get a taxicab brands the youth a "piker" in the eyes of his partner, and unless he happens to wear the latest thing in clothes he is cast aside as a "hick." Theater parties cost more today, and if the suitor would stand ace-high with his "intended" he must not pass up a single performance. He must spend money to prove that he has it. He must shower flowers and bonbons on her to prove his devotion. He must know how to drive a motor car and speak familiarly of the latest models. This, it is understood, is true of the so-called middle class, as well as of the upper strata of society.

Few girls of today consider it necessary to know how to manage a home. Few need understand the culinary arts practised by their mothers. Few stop to ask what the young man knows about other things than having a good time. If she can select a good gown and he can pay for it, the problem is solved with her. Of character she rarely asks, for reputation seems to be sufficient. And her father demands, "Can you support her in the manner to which she is accustomed?" Evidently he forgets how her mother sacrificed pleasures when she started out with him.

Statisticians point with alarm to the fact that the average man of today marries six to nine years later in life than the youth of 15 or 20 years ago. The explanation is easy—it costs too much. A girl demands that a suitor keep himself stranded showing her a round of pleasures and that he save up at the same time enough to get married. To a few young men it seems that the modern girls is a cross between a leech and a parasite, "playing" boys for all there may be in it for them. Small wonder it is that an Eastern judge decided last week that a man may claim girls handed over before a broken engagement. His decision was to the effect that any girl taking them knowing that she will jilt the suitor is obtaining money or the value thereof under false pretenses and as such is guilty of fraudulent representations. In the case in question the insincerity of the girl was established by evidence and the court ruled that she should repay him for the cash he had spent on her. In view of the ruling suffice it to exclaim, with Shakespeare's Venetian money-lender, "O wise young judge!" Maybe the court has been "stung" in the past.

Sometimes it seems that candidates really believe the stuff they hand out about how they hope to be of service to the people and how they are reluctantly putting aside business in order to respond to the call of the public.

If every woman in town has made her husband vote for the bond issues, we're convinced that suffrage is good stuff.

Begins to look like the fall of Verdun is scheduled to occur when Villa surrenders.

GOOD EVENING No more voting to do until August.

NEW NOTES & MOVIELAND

By DAISY DEAN

EDITH STOREY, the popular Vitaphone star, was one of the "early birds" of her profession, having started her career on the stage at the age of ten as an extra with Miss Eleanor Robson in "Audrey." Her dramatic ability was so marked that she was immediately engaged to play a child's part in "The Little Princess," and the next season she played one of the children in "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch." Little Miss Storey remained with this attraction three seasons. Her next engagement was with "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm," in which she played a sixteen-year-old girl. This completed her actual stage career and for the past four or five years she has been seen in Vitaphone productions. She appears in multiple-reel features and plays opposite Antonio Moreno the most of the time. Miss Storey was born in 1892.

Seeing Selves as Others See Them

For the first time in the history of the gilded 400, New York's society folk are seeing themselves as others see them. On the movie screen. More than five hundred young people, members of Gotham's inner circles of polite society, took part in the filming of "The Flame of Kapur," a drama written for the occasion by Miss Grace R. Henry, a talented member of the Junior League, which is composed of 800 New York debutantes.

The league was organized fifteen years ago by Miss Mary Harriman (now Mrs. C. C. Rumsey), daughter of the late E. H. Harriman. Hitherto its dramatic efforts were confined to the speaking stage, but this year it decided to stage a photoplay, and so skillfully has this been done that $20,000 has already been netted for charity.

Clara Kimball Young has made a great success in pictures. She has received a proposal of marriage. It reads: "I'm a good Baptist, but even if you are an actress I am willing to marry you. I get twenty-two dollars a week, and see by the papers that you get $2,000. We could live very comfortably on $2,022. If interested, write me and I'll send picture."

Edith Storey.

Shakespearean plays have not generally been considered suitable for the movies. For one thing costume plays are seldom popular with movie actresses. Nevertheless Francis X. Lushman is going to do Romeo and Beverly Bayne will impersonate Juliet in a Metro production of Romeo and Juliet.

Do you reckon you could jump across a forty-seven foot ravine in an automobile? You probably reckon not. This, however, is the fact that Thomas Chatterton and Juanita Hanson are said to have performed in one of the episodes of a picture they were taking.

Margery Dale, youngest daughter of Alan Dale, well known as a writer on subjects connected with the stage, makes her debut as a movie actress with Mme. Petrova in "The Scarlet Woman."

What Other Papers Say

THE GREAT DISCOVERER.

The greatest modern discoverer is Col. Theodore Roosevelt. He is constantly discovering something which he calls new. He is an explorer, an exploiter and a political skirt-dancer. It might be well to enumerate a few of the Colonel's most important discoveries. They are as follows:

1. He discovered that Theodore Roosevelt is the biggest single noise-maker in the world.
2. He rediscovered the moral code and then broke it by violating his third-term pledge to the American people.

Why should Public Printer J. E. Cross be criticised for appointing his wife as chief clerk? Didn't the good young governor make his nephew, Hugh Buell, of Columbus, deputy state marshal. And isn't the brother-in-law of Secretary of State Charles Q. Hildbrand holding a chief clerkship under him? Didn't Mayor Royal C. Bigbee appoint his own son Cecil, director of safety, for this city. TRAVELETTE BY NIKKAR.

THE CITY OF PEARLS.

There is a city in Ceylon with a particularly unpronounceable name, that is a unique combination of a gambling-house, a mining camp in a gold-rush, and a disappearing stage-setting all in one. It owes its being its wealth and its peculiarities to the humble oyster.

If you go to Marichchikaddi at any but certain seasons, you will find nothing there at all—only the rolling, featureless beach. If you go at the right time, you find a wildly excited metropolis of forty thousand people. The right time is after the Indian government has announced that there will be a pearl fishery. For this town with the unfortunate name is queen of the richest and oldest of pearl beds—the beds where the most and the best of the world's pearls come from.

Nowadays the beds are only worked when the official expert gives the word. In the closed season, the whole population packs up and leaves, and in a few weeks there is no trace of the city.

When the word has gone forth that there will be a fishery and the date has been set, an army of coolies descends on Marichchikaddi and builds the town. Flimsy structures and plaited coconut leaf go up by hundreds, and also impressive mansions of the same material for the Englishmen in charge. Streets are laid out and lamp-posts set up; all is made ready. Then comes the rush. From all over the East they come—the players in the greatest lottery that is run. There are the divers and their retainers, the shrewd Indian pearl dealers with a credit of millions, the smaller speculators, everyone down to the humblest coolie who hopes to pick up a lucky oyster on the sly.

The boats go out of a morning, a fleet of five hundred, over the shallow blue waters. The little brown divers, Arabs and Indians, men from the Malay Islands, plunge into the depths to fill their baskets. Two million oysters a day they will bring to the surface sometimes, before they make sail and scurry for harbor. Here the division of oysters takes place—two to the government for every one that goes to the man who found it. The government sells its oysters unopened, at auction; the diver may sell his "blind," or open them himself and sell the pearls.

It is the greatest of gambles. Everybody has a stake in it. Unopened oysters pass as currency in the shops and food stalls—what tradesman would not sell a fried fish for a shell that may contain a king's ransom? Oysters are the recognized small change of the town. Any shell may hide the prize stone of the year. Recklessness is in the air. The value of gold is forgotten in the gambler's lust for taking a chance. A few men win, and many men lose, and everybody forgets about the losers and talks about the winners, until you would think that every naked coolie in Marichchikaddi was making his fortune.

HEALTH HINTS

HABITS OF THINKING MAY CAUSE MENTAL DISEASE

There are certain periods in the life of an individual when mental disease, in those predisposed, is likely to occur. For women there are four of these danger periods. For men the mid-period of life, between 35 and 50, is of special danger. It is during this time in man that stress and strain are keenly felt.

Inherit Diseases. Experiments have shown that mental disease and mental deficiency depends in a great measure (50 to 75 per cent of cases) upon the mental capacity, so to speak, which has been handed down from both parents.

Most parents afflicted with mental deficiency, various forms of insanity, and mild forms of mental diseases will transmit the same or similar tints to their children.

Infectious Diseases. Especially scarlet fever, meningitis, influenza and convulsions, during early childhood, all produce an injurious effect upon the nervous system which in turn has a harmful effect on the mind.

Surroundings Play Part. During the growth of the child, surrounding conditions play a large part in production of mental disorders.

Investigations have also shown that bad habits of thinking pass insensibly into acute mental disease.

Suspiciousness, sensitiveness, exclusiveness, brooding, anxiety, fear, fretting, overwork, overexcitement and dependency, if unchecked or uninterfered with, may run riot and bring their possessor to mental wreckage.

TAKEN WITH CROUP.

"A few nights ago one of my patrons had a child taken with croup," writes M. T. Davis, merchant, Bearsville, W. Va. "About midnight he came to my store and bought a bottle of Foley's Honey and Tar Compound. Before morning the child was entirely recovered." Many such letters have been written. H. F. AUTHORITY SAYS THERE IS NOTHING REAL NEW IN MAGIC

Modern Good Luck Charms Almost as Old as the World Itself.

Origin and Meaning of Charms and Rites Matter of Speculation.

Break a mirror and you will have seven years of bad luck. Open an umbrella in the house and misfortune will surely befall you. Thirteen is an unlucky number and Friday is an unlucky day. Should a black cat cross your path in front of you some calamity will come to you.

According to popular superstitions these signs, among numerous others, are forecasts of misfortune, which you can ward off by multitudinous charms such as touching wood, spitting a mouthful of water three times, carrying luck pieces, or hanging an inverted horseshoe over the door.

The original and real meaning of many superstitions, charms, rites and spells is now a matter of speculation.

"Magical things, objects or actions, in their simplest forms, are charms, spells and rites," writes Professor Carverth Read of London. "Since the ends for which they can be used are either to protect oneself or to exert power over other persons or things, each of these kinds of magic thing may be defensive or offensive."

Defensive Charm. "A defensive charm is called an amulet, and an offensive charm is a talisman. For defensive charms, say against sickness or accident, there is, I believe, no appropriate name. Offensive spells, for example, to control the weather, or to curse an enemy, may be called incantations. Rites, that is, any magic actions that are not spells, may also be defensive, as to touch wood, may also be defensive, as to touch wood, or offensive, as to point at a man. We have no names for these different incantations. For these simplest beginnings the whole mystery of magic seems to have been developed."

"If magic was practiced in the Aurignacian culture, say 30,000 years ago, how can we get to the back of it? Only by speculation. But speculation is not mere guesswork, if we always keep in view such facts as we have."

"The earliest types of magic, charms, rites and spells are the most prevalent, being found not only among savages, but even in civilized countries the world over. Most of the uneducated, many of the half-educated and not a few of those supposed to have finished their education employ them."

"The idea of the amulet or the talisman is found in fetiches, beads, praying wheels and equality in a long mimetic dance or a passion play whose central purpose always is to avert some evil or to secure some good."

Professor Leuba, another authority, suggests that "magical rites may sometimes be invented to relieve ex-

Look and Feel Clean, Sweet and
Fresh Every Day

Drink a glass of real hot water before breakfast to wash out poisons.

Life is not merely to live, but to live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning and flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, biliousness, stomach trouble, rheumatism, others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly countenances are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store which will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of intestinal sanitation.

THE WORKSHOP OF THE WORLD

Statistics of Imports and Exports Show Reasons
For Prosperity.

The story of the economic revolution being brought about in American business and industry under President Wilson is again strikingly shown by the figures on imports and exports for February as issued by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce.

The imports of crude materials for use in manufacturing amount to $89,600,000 as contrasted with exports of crude materials for further use in manufacturing amounting to about $59,000,000. For the eight months of the fiscal year ending in February, these same figures respectively are $549,000,000 for imports and $345,000,000 for exports. During the same eight months of the year before, the figures were $236,000,000 for imports and $329,000,000 for exports. The exports of crude materials are relatively smaller and the imports of raw products materials that are turned into articles of higher grade in the factories of the U. S. have increased very greatly. The imports of manufacturers for further use in manufacturing were $3,000,000 in February and the exports $59,000,000. For the eight-months period the imports of manufacturers for further use in manufacturing were $203,000,000 and the exports $377,000,000. These same figures for the eight months of the year before were $157,000,000 for imports and $308,000,000 for exports.

All of which is the smallest part of the story. The imports of manufactures ready for consumption in February were $26,000,000 and the exports of completed articles were $179,000,000. For the eight months, these imports were $196,000,000 and exports of the finished products $1,122,000,000. For the same eight months of the fiscal year 1915, the imports of completed manufactures amount to $243,000,000 and the exports to $429,000,000.

The bulk of the imports of crude materials consists of commodities not produced in this country, such as rubber, etc. The U. S. is now the workshop of the world. That's why the country is enjoying its unexampled prosperity.

Statement, such as the dancing of women when the men are at war. Such was said to be the practice of Arakanian women, who, as they danced, swept the dust away with their fans and sang:

"As we sweep the dust away,
So may our husbands rout the enemy."

"If this was arbitrarily invented it was mimetic magic. These women set an example of what should happen and then confirmed it with a spell."

"Many rites and observances seem to depend upon the notion of a favorable or unfavorable current of invisible power," Professor Read concludes. "It is good to plant crops or to begin any undertaking when the moon is waxing or the tide is rising, for these events show that the set of the current is favorable to increase our prosperity. Again, one may incite the current by making a beginning on a small scale, as in bringing on rain by spilling water or leading to help the crops to grow."

NEGRO BOUND OVER TO THE GRAND JURY

John Fields, colored, arrested yesterday on a serious charge, pleaded guilty to the charge in criminal court this morning and was bound over to the grand jury under $500 bond. Captain Gurtis of the South Side fire department arrested the man while he was in the company of Ralph Salter, aged 16, a boy tramp.

Police were first informed of criminal intent of Fields by John Adams, 14, who claimed that the former attempted to lead him inside a box car on the C., H. & D. railroad. He claims that when he refused to go with the negro, he was choked and kicked by the negro. Finger prints were plainly visible on his neck.

OPIUM, DOUGHNUT, GAS, FALL, HOSPITAL

Which Words Give Merely a Hint of Chinese Story
Unfolded Below.

NEW YORK, April 25.—Wing Huye lies groaning on a cot in Hudson street hospital today suffering a double fracture of his right leg and mourning the loss of a profitable opium business of long standing, all as a result of his attempt to introduce modern European war methods into police circles.

Wing, who conducted a restaurant in Doyers street, for a long time has been suspected by police of maintaining a traffic in opium as a side line. To verify these suspicions a raid was made on Wing's place of business.

While Policeman Mitchell kept an eye on Wing, two other bluecoats ascended the stairs and routed out his son, Wey, who was sleeping peacefully. Under Wey's pillow they found twelve "toys" of hop such as sell in the underworld for $1 a toy.

Meanwhile Wing's actions were peculiar to say the least and, as it turned out, his ways were dark. Wing under the watchful eye of Policeman Mitchell reached for a "dashbo" or sort of Chinese doughnut.

Mitchell allowed Wing to gratify his apparently innocent craving, figuring that Wing would have a hard time before him and might be the better for a little sustenance.

But after biting savagely into the "dashbo" Wing hurried it to the ground. It wasn't a Chinese doughnut at all—Mitchell realized this a minute later—but a gas bomb such as are so popular in the trenches.

In a minute the room was filled with fumes which defied the nostrils and ruined the disposition.

With an Anglo-Saxon instinct for fresh air, Mitchell dashed to a window. So did Wing, continuing right on through the window. He fell thirty-five feet to the street and that's how he received the before mentioned fractures.

MONTE CARLO LOSES STOCK COMPANY IS IS ENTIRE MILITARY ON ORRHEUM STAGE

Four Officers and 82 Men Disappear to Their Native Lands.

MONTE CARLO, April 25.—The old Guard of Honor of the Prince of Monaco, four officers and 82 men, which constituted the military force of the principality in pre-war times, has disappeared since the European war came, for the whole gendarmierie of Monaco was recruited from abroad and the members were all either Frenchmen or Italians. They have now been called to the colors of their respective countries, so that neutral Monaco found itself suddenly without adequate protection. Then the people volunteered for service, but to prove their independence as well as their dislike for militarism, they wear no uniform, merely their ordinary civilian costume and a red-and-white woollen armband.

In front of the main entrance to the palace stands a sentry, a 14-year-old boy, leaning on an old pattern rifle, its fixed bayonet towering several feet above his head. He is dressed in a nondescript tweed suit, very baggy at the knees, and wears no cartridge belt, merely the red-and-white armband.

Yet Monaco is not entirely neutral. Many of its youth have entered the French Foreign Legion, and the Heir-Apparent, Prince Louis, holds a commission in a French regiment. Funeral services for Anna Mildred Bushong, year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Bushong, of 623 Center street, will be held Wednesday at 10 o'clock at the family home. The Rev. V. Hayes Miller, pastor of the South Side Church of Christ, will officiate. The body will be accompanied by way of the Ohio Electric to West Liberty, O., where interment will be made. The little one died last night after an illness of eight days from measles and pneumonia.

He said: "If the new hair grower, Mildredina Hair Remedy, increases its sales as it has during the past year, it will be used by nearly every man, woman and child in America within eight years."

"When Mildredina Hair Remedy is used almost universally, dandruff will disappear and with its departure baldness, itching scalp, splitting hair and all scalp diseases will follow and twenty years from now a bald head will be a rarity." What Our Neighbors Say.

Mansfield, Ohio.—"I am glad to endorse and recommend Dr. Pierce's Medical Discovery. I used it for 'toning-up' medicine and it was satisfactory. It increased my appetite and straightened me up every way. It is a good builder and tonic."—Mrs. W. T. Cookston, 151 South Foster Street.

A new man or "a new woman" can be made out of one that's "used-up," bilious and dyspeptic. It's done by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It starts the torpid liver into beautiful action, purifies and enriches the blood, cleanses, repairs, and strengthens the system, and restores health and vigor. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it sets at work all the processes of digestion and nutrition, and builds up flesh and strength.

HAPPINESS

HOW MANY OF us are there who really know the true meaning of the word, happiness. True, there are some cynical people who scoff at the very idea of happiness, and yet when one comes to sum up everything that is worth while, it comes to only one thing, and that is—happiness. It is something that should be sought by everyone, and found by everyone.
When you stop to consider all the persons in this world that are not happy it is indeed appalling because it is so unnecessary. There are so many who bewail their fate but fail to see the beauty all about them.
Happiness to us is as much as our health, as much as our religion, for after all it is both. Happiness, like love, is the true need of the soul and the body. Its satisfaction makes men and women better citizens. Its satisfaction brings smiles to our faces and songs to our heart, which in themselves are greater to be desired than all things on earth. The crown of happiness is peace, and the result of happiness is understanding. Look about you—see the blue in the sky, your garden coming up through the good old earth, hear a linnet's greeting. All are simple little joys of life, too commonly overlooked in our grasping for something beyond our pale, forgetting that the big things of life are but the products of the little simple things.
Remember, too, that the happy woman can accomplish twice as much as the discontented woman, and is by far the more desirable. Don't mourn your lot, your seeming unappreciation, don't be a cynic about the way of the world, for the world is just as your heart makes it.
Common places are the raw materials of greatness, and greatness is nothing more nor less than being able to spread, induce, and believe in HAPPINESS.

Betty Botta, of Borkins, says—
"If we wimmin cud vote there wouldn't be any doubt about the bond issues carrying."

Cheer Up, Dears, the bond issue is sure to carry before we will need to wear our new spring shoes.

his subject. At present he is touring Ohio under the auspices of the Bird Lovers' league of Cleveland, was spent in investigation of the local industries by the members of the Lotus club that they are planning to spend another day the same way in the near future. They all met at noon at the Lima club for luncheon and instead of carrying out their previous plans for investigation, they attended the Henry Oldys' lecture at the Chamber of Commerce.

Miss Helen Pence will entertain the members of the Dramatic club next Tuesday evening at her home instead of Monday evening as was announced.

Marrying for Money
BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

The funeral service at the Towson residence was over and the people fied out and stood silently on either side of the walk as the pallbearers carried the casket to the hearse. Then followed Dudley with Marian on one arm and Ortrude on the other. Nell glanced in surprise at Olive,
who stood near
her. Olive motioned with a quiver of the eyebrows for her to look. Dudley handed Ortrude into the first carriage, closed the door and motioned for the driver to drive on. Into the next carriage George and his wife and Marian and Dudley seated themselves and drove on behind the first vehicle with its solitary occupant. Nell and Dick, Olive and the doctor rode together, and as they slowly journeyed to the cemetery the tragic ending of the unhappy marriage was discussed.

"I wonder what that lonely woman riding in solitary state to the grave of a husband she never loved is thinking about," said Olive solemnly.
"I know one thing; I would rather have the thoughts of anyone else in this whole procession than here," Dr. Elison spoke as if he had had a sample of her thoughts and did not like them.
"I should have thought she would have arranged to have Mrs. Tupper ride with her, rather than be all alone," observed Dick.
"Perhaps Mrs. Tupper had views of her own on the subject." All glanced toward Nell. "I happen to know that Mrs. Tupper was none too fond of her."
"The marriage was a tragedy; the end would have to be tragic whatever it was." The doctor gazed off over the dreary wind-swept landscape. "I am not sure but all will be happier this way than any other under the circumstances."

"Why, Gaylord!" exclaimed Olive in surprise.
"Everybody is accustomed to think that death is the worst thing that can come. We never stop to think how much harder to bear several other things are." All seemed to be thinking of what he had said, for no one spoke.

"Death is so much more kind than shame and disgrace that we would all gladly choose it for ourselves or our dear ones," he continued. "Then there is the helpless invalid. Who of us would not choose death in preference to a long period of helplesness? Worse than this is insanity.
And I believe many people would agree with me when I say that death is far preferable to living in a home full of discord and heartburnings."

"Of course it would be better for her, but he had his children to live for," objected Olive.
"Mrs. Townsend acted like poison on Marian and her father saw it.
The girl's disposition was being ruined. Now she will be removed from that influence and the softening influence of her grief will take the poison out of her nature before her character is ruined by it. I doubt if the children will suffer more than they did in seeing how miserable the father was. Death is the only solution of such a problem; only death is not always so prompt to relieve."

"I cannot think of anything more awful than to be tied to a person and waiting for death to set you free," Nell slipped her hand in Dick's as she spoke.
"I believe death parts some people forever, if they want to be parted. I hope it does."

"Why wouldn't it? Souls surely have the same privilege as bodies, that of choosing their company," said the doctor as they turned into the cemetery gate.

MR. STORK, LADIES AND GENTLEMEN!

A LETTER WHICH was signed "Anxious Mother" came to me the other day and it not only interested but amused me immensely. Here is a paragraph from it, laying great stress on the treatment of children seen on the screen:

"Because of my little girl's good looks, several of my friends have advised me to take her to a moving picture studio, but only yesterday I heard that in order to make the children act they are badly treated—pinched when the part calls for it and fed unhealthy candies in payment for their laughter."

"Please tell me if this is so, Miss Pickford, as I was so shocked when I heard it. I felt I could never sit through a picture play with children again."

So this is what I have to write to "Anxious Mother."
Of course the studio is about the worst place in the world to send your child if you do not wish the little one to be badly spoiled, because our love for them makes it temptation to cuddle and fuss over them.

There is no time a child is dearer than when she unconsciously plays a little part in a picture, and while peppermint sticks often do feature in the training of a child actress they are the only sticks that do!

It is a very simple thing to make little children cry, much easier than it is to make them laugh. With some it is because they are in a strange environment; with others it is habit and training. Picture to yourselves how easy it would be to play upon a child's imagination when the faces conditions similar to these.

On the stage the goggle-eyed camera is ever turned upon them, and even the director's voice sounds far away.
Always dear mother is watching from behind a wall of scenery, but being just a few feet out of mother's arms stirs the little heart to beating fast. We say to them in low, modulated tones, all in a minor key, repeating our sentences over and over again, "You are playing the part of a little girl who feels very sad now, Doris, and that's why you are going to cry—that's why you are going to cry." It is really amusing, but in a few minutes the big sobs come splashing down, and often the little children will sob as if their hearts were going to break.

Clickety, clickety, click! goes the camera. When the director says,
"Stop—lights out—that's the end of this scene," in the wink of an eye the tears have tumbled down to mingle in their dresses and their faces are wreathed with smiles.

The wee babies on the screen are so sweet I do not wonder every mother unconsciously cries out,
"Ooooh!" when a little baby is shown kicking in its tub or looking with big, velvety, wondering eyes down from the screen upon the audience.

A director told me a cunning little story about a child who had never played in pictures before. He tried for two hours to make that

CARTER & CARROLL

LOOK ABOUT YOUR HOME WITH EYES THAT SEE
HOW ARE THINGS?

Do they look pretty good to you or are they worn dingy? The Rug in the living room—is it beginning to look a bit shabby? Is the dining room Rug still beautiful? And how about the one in the front hall? If the results of your examination are not satisfactory, call on us. We can show you the best Rugs made in America, the most beautiful and the best wearing.

WHITTALL RUGS

"WHITTALL" ANGLO-PERSIAN

Made from carefully selected worsted yarns and woven so closely that they rival the fine hand-made Persian importations. Dyed by the fastest known methods with a lustrous finish, they are the most beautiful and serviceable Rugs made in America.

Designs are faithful copies of rare imported Rugs and like them wear only increases their beauty.
The 9x12 size is priced at$68.00

"WHITTALL" ROYAL WORCESTER

Best value in a regular Wilton Rug. It is double tied, has the same Oriental wool as the Anglo-Persian, only somewhat lighter in weight.

It has a fine luster and is made in Oriental and Persian designs with the same soft colorings.

Standard sizes in stock, others may be had on short notice.
The 9x12 size is priced at$50.00

TEPRAC

This quality is the result of an effort to make a beautiful Rug—not too high in price and with especially fine wearing qualities. All this has been accomplished and in the Whittall Teprac, we offer the best low priced all wool Wilton made. It has a high pile and like all Whittall products, the dyes are fast.
The 9x12 size is priced at$40.00

CHLIDEMA

This Body Brussels is absolutely the highest type of this kind of rug that can be produced. It is made in such a variety of patterns as to satisfy all possible requirements. Brussels has the merit of being easily kept clean and is therefore highly desirable for many places.
The 9x12 size is priced at$35.00

PEERLESS

The Peerless is but slightly different from Chlidema in quality, being a full five frame Body Brussels Rug, strictly all worsted and has the usual Whittall high standard of workmanship. It comes in the regular Wilton patterns and makes a very and easily-cared for Rug.
The 9x12 size is priced at$30.00

Those who prefer can buy our Rug—$5.00 and $1.00 per week.
N. B.—Special values offered on Rugs this week. After May 1st they will be higher. This is an opportune time; make your selections now.

youngster look cross and indignant, molding like a sculptor with his clay, hoping to fashion her little features so there would be a scowl on her face and her little rosy mouth would be drawn down in the corners.

Finally, as the last resource, he determined to act as if he were so thoroughly disappointed in her he never wanted to see her again.

"Well, here's a little girl," he began, "that I thought was going to be a nice little girl and do everything I wanted, but she's the naughtiest little girl I ever knew. I can't think of anything naughtier except a little cinnamon bear, and if I were this little girl, I'd just go right away and live in a bear's cage, just so I could growl all day with the rest of them."

"She never flinched," the director told me, "but looked at me with her big blue eyes steadily fixed upon me. 'I'm a wicked fairy, I'm,' and she stamped her foot. 'I'll turn you into a big green toad.'"

"If this keeps on," and the director looked at her as fiercely as any ogre that ever growled from the pages of Grimm's "Fairy Tales," "I'll have to turn you over by knee."

At last she looked at him so scornfully the camera could have had at least 100 feet of it, then, finally, with a curl of her lip, she flounced off the scene, saying, "Well, I don't think that's a nice thing for a gentleman to say to a little girl who is not four years old."

Children are like wise old poll parrots, and it would surprise you to hear these little theatrical fads sitting around, talking about the film releases and the important parts they played in them!

Bless that dear, good, old Mr. Stark!

Answers to Correspondents

Selma—I do think the old Indian legends would make splendid films, and, as you doubtless know, a few such have been done. I will keep your suggestion in mind.

A. W.—Your letter was very helpful and encouraging and was very much appreciated by me. Even if you are lame it has not circumscribed your outlook on life.

Hetty B.—When you have your photograph taken, no special make up will be needed. Do not use rouge, as red photographs black. I would not advise your using grease paint. Use powder.

Theresa L. H.—Your mistake is a common one, but actresses do not succeed through notoriety, but through hard work and ability. Many clever actresses have ruined their careers by mistaken attempts at advertising.

Katie M.—I had not heard that the actor you mention is married. Perhaps it is a false rumor.

Gertrude F.—The photoplay you describe was "Beulah" and Henry Walthall was the hero. Joyce Moore played leading lady.

"ARE YOU HALF THE MAN"---

Read on this page Ella Wheeler Wilcox's generous tribute to a famous song. Praise from Ella Wheeler Wilcox is very great praise indeed.

What a compass is to the ship, a man's memory of his father and mother should be to him.

That memory has saved many a man at the critical moment, and turned back many that had started on the wrong path. (Read Mrs. Wilcox's article.)

What Is Your Answer to This Song?

Mrs. Ella Wheeler Wilcox, the world's famous poetess, pays a tribute to the power of a mother's influence.

ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

PASSING along Madison Square recently a small army of men was observed encompassing almost the entire block. Men stood four abreast, and were packed in as tightly as the proverbial sardine in the box. They were slowly and patiently waiting to make their way to the entrance of a certain building where large posters announced a pugilistic contest was about to begin.

It is a good thing for a man to be interested in athletic sports; it is a good thing for a man to understand wrestling, boxing, fencing and whatever tends to self-defense and the defense of others, but it is a misfortune when a man wastes his time, his energies and his ideals of life in prize fighting. It is only a step beyond the brutality and savagery of bull fighting.

There is a song which ought to be sung and played at all these gatherings where men meet to witness what they call "sport." This song is entitled, "Are You Half the Man Your Mother Thought You'd Be?" That is a good title for a song. It is a haunting title and with simple, appealing music, it is sure to stay in the memory of one who hears it sung a few times.

Instinct Leads Mothers to Have Great Ideals for Children.

There is not one mother in one thousand who does not dream high and happy dreams about her little boy. Even mothers who are not good women and who have bad habits want their boys to become good and great men, and the simplest and the humblest women have often the greatest ideals for their children. They are ready to make any sacrifice and to deny themselves any comforts in order to give their children what they call a chance in life. They are not always wise in their efforts to produce these results. They often awaken ambition rather than aspiration in the minds of their children.

MRS. SHARRITT'S FUNERAL.

The Rev. E. A. Trabert, pastor of St. Paul's Lutheran church, will conduct the funeral services, to be held this evening at 7:30 o'clock, over the body of Mrs. Catherine Sharritt, widow of the late J. L. Sharritt, who died yesterday morning, at the home of her daughter,

But their impulse is right, even when their methods are wrong. Almost every man can remember the pride he felt when his mother praised him for some good deed, some unselfish act, or for bringing home a good report from his teachers. He can recall how, in those moments, he planned to do wonderful things, and to make his mother proud of him when he became a man.

The song, "Are You Half the Man Your Mother Thought You'd Be?" is addressed to men with such memories. "Have you kept your promise to her that you made while on her knee? Can you truly say you're half the man today that she always thought you'd be? Is he proud to be your mother; is it joy or sorrow in your eyes you see? Are you all she planned and prayed for, all she raked and scraped and slaved for? Are you half the man your mother thought you'd be?"

If you cannot answer these lines in the affirmative, why not right about face and begin over? There is really no work on earth so interesting as the building of character. There is a genius of sculpture in America now, Mr. Borglum, who has taken a contract to carve on the rock of a mountain at Atlanta, Georgia, the whole history of the south. It will require ten years to accomplish it; it is a magnificent idea and when accomplished the work will last as long as the mountain lasts, which may be a few hundred years, or a few thousand years, or a few million.

Building Your Character is the Greatest Work You Can Ever do. A cataclysm might occur which would cause the mountain to be sunk under the seas or swallowed in an earthquake, as whole continents have been swallowed and sunk in eras gone by. But the sculptor's art is supposed to be the most imperishable of all the arts and so there is deep joy in his heart when he is carrying out his ideals.

Each human being has a more wonderful work before him than any sculptor if he chooses to undertake the reshaping and rebuilding of his own character. Character is the one thing which is immortal. Men die, nations pass away, continents sink in the seas, oceans dry up and mountains fall, but character lives on from era to era, from epoch to epoch, until it goes back to the original source which is God, and helps to form new universes and to create new solar systems.

Therefore it is the most glorious work which you can undertake—the work of building yourself over—overcoming your weakness, conquering your bad habits, strengthening your will power, elevating your ideals and becoming a power for good in the world.

Once you get interested in this work, life will assume new meaning, and every day will be like a new birth to you. If you miss in your efforts to obtain material success, it will seem of small moment to you, so long as you know that you are making your daily life worth while, and gradually, step by step, climbing up to the tower-room of your nature, where you may bask in the sunlight of aspiration and noble thoughts.

Even Material Failure Cannot Affect Success in Character.

If the things which you attempt to do to help other people fail, if these you attempt to assist prove unworthy, if you receive ingratitude for kindness, still life will be worth while and there will be joy in existence, because you know your own impulses are good, your own efforts worthy, and your own character is being formed in the likeness of God.

Start in today and try and make yourself "the man your mother thought you'd be."

Blanche Sweet has a part that is most suitable to her and appears to splendid advantage. It is scarcely necessary to speak in praise of Theodore Roberts and Thomas Meighan, who are other important members of the excellent cast. The Russian atmosphere is made convincing and there are the usual splendid lighting effects which have in the minds of the public become one of the distinctive merits of every Lasky production. Most interesting pictures of "Neil and Old Manila" are shown in the Burton Holmes Travels series.

STAR THEATRE

"Miss Blossom," a two-part Lasky drama with Myrtle Gonzalez and Fred Church in the leading roles is the principle feature of the new bill at the Star theatre today. Others pictures are "Chicken Hearted," in which Francis Ford in featured, and "The Newlyweds' Mix-up," a Nestor comedy in which Eddie Lyons and Betty Compson do some capital fooling.

AT THE ROYAL

At the Royal today and tomorrow will be displayed another of the famous Bluebird Fine Arts Features, starring the DeHavens in the five-reeler "The Wrong Door." This is the story of the mysterious manner in which a millionaire has been robbed. The detective who has been assigned to the case has considerable trouble in securing a clue, but finally his chance arrives and he meets the adopted daughter of one of the crooks. She pays him for a jewel box which had been stolen from her and which he had later bought at public auction, and when he received the bills, he finds that they bear the numbers of those which had been stolen from the millionaire. Following his clue, he learns that the girl has no knowledge of the bills having been stolen. In addition to this feature will be shown a comedy subject.

AT DREAMLAND

At Dreamland today the popular star, Vivian Rich, appears in the three-reel Mutual feature "The Wayfarers" and the simple announcement of her appearance guarantees good patronage. In this she plays the part of a girl who contemplated suicide, but whose life was saved by a young fellow who at this time was eluding the police because he had been accused of something he had not committed. The man in which Providence interfered and the happy ending is all that one could wish in this feature. To add amusement to the occasion, funny George Ovey appears in another of the famous Cub comedies, "Jerry, the Conquering Hero."

THE STRAND

At the Strand today will be shown another of the sensational Cosmo feature productions, "The Bandit of Port Avon." A brother and sister are living happily in a hut in the mountains when a worthless young fellow, and son of wealthy parents is watching outside for the departure of the brother. As soon as the brother has left, the scoundrel enters the cabin and tries to press his attentions on the girl, who puts up a stout resistance, but when she finds she is helpless, she hurries herself from a cliff rather than yield to his advances. Then follows exciting developments.

FISH IN THE MILK

By FRANK A. HAYES.

Spring approached, and I was out very early of morning, when I became interested in two dairy wagons. "Rivals, as sure as fate," I thought. One was Farmer Brown's wagon; the other, Farmer Jones'.

As the days passed I could notice that when Brown would make an improvement in his milk cans, wagon or harness, Jones would, the very next morning, have as good or better.

I saw here a contest to the finish between Brown and Jones that appealed to me very much, being myself a farmer. My sympathies were with Brown, as he was the older man, and he furnished milk to the family where I roomed.

Warm days having arrived, I concluded to go fishing, and on a particular Saturday I started for the river, a few miles from town. On the way out I heard a wagon approaching from the rear. Looking back, I recognized the red top of Brown's milk wagon, and as I stepped aside to let him pass was hailed with these words:

"Young fellow, if you get lank under the jacket, why jist saunter over thar to that white house an' I'll feed you." About noon I concluded I would "saunter over" and share Brown's extended hospitality.

"I knowed you'd come 'bout feedin' time. Come in and have a cheer. Ketch anything?"

"Not a thing," I replied, "and I concluded I would rather visit with you than to fish."

After a good dinner, Brown said: "Young fellow, now I want you to tell me how I can down Jones."

"Well, Mr. Brown, I have often thought, when your wagon would round the paved street, that if a scheme could be devised by which this noise would not wake your customers at such an early hour it would be a winner."

Sure enough, next morning but one, Brown drove down the street with his horses shod with coffee sacks.

A week later Jones appeared with his horse all shod with rubber.

Soon they both had equipped themselves pretty well with rubber apparatus of various kinds, Brown having bought rubber tires for his wagon.

It began to look as if Jones was down, when, one afternoon, Brown rushed into my room exclaiming:

"This time I am beat. Jones has an automobile."

After dinner I walked up to the "corner grocery," whose owner, a Mr. Johnson, and I were good friends.

I found Johnson back in the warehouse changing the water on some minnows he had in a tank. I saw two milk cans, and learned they belonged to Farmer Jones.

On Tuesday morning I told Brown to meet me at Johnson's store at ten o'clock.

On arriving there I pointed out his competitor's cans.

"Now, listen," said I, "in those cans will be found a little milk and we will pour in as much water. In your tank are some minnows; we will get some of them and drop in one of those cans, and then we'll have Jones tell us how they got there."

Jones came in and started back for his cans, when Johnson said:

"Say, all you fellows, come back here with Jones and me. I want to show you something."

Of course, we all went. Johnson said:

"Now, Jones, you have always sworn to me, and to all your customers, that you never watered any milk. How did these minnows get into this can?"

"For Lord's sake, men!" exclaimed Jones. "I'll confess. I was in a hurry this mornin' and didn't get all the milk done, and as I crossed the creek I reached down and scooped up a couple of bucketfuls of water and—"

and poured it into this can!"

Uses of Teakwood.

Teakwood is being used in India for general purposes in house and ship building, for bridges, railway sleepers, furniture and shingles. It is also used much for carving, the Burmese carved teak being especially noted.

Teak has in the past been used to some extent for gun carriages, but it is not at present considered well adapted for this purpose, as it has been found that it splits too readily to be thoroughly valuable in artillery work.

Teak is strongly and characteristically scented, is of oily texture and the surface feels greasy to the touch. Teak logs when first cut will not float. The wood darkens with age, and after a number of years becomes almost black.

Everlastingly at it.

Bones, a hostler, failed to show up at the lively stable one morning.

"Where's Bones?" the boss asked.

"His father's dead, sir," explained the other hostler.

"Oh!"

The next day again Bones failed to show up. And the next day still he was absent.

"Bones not around?" said the boss.

"His father," said the other hostler, "as I told you before, sir—"

"Well, look here," said the boss, "you slip on your coat and run around to Bones' house and find out if he intends to stay away all the time his father is dead."

FOREIGN SITUATION ASSURES WALL ST.

NEW YORK, April 25.—Judging from the course of the market at today's opening, Wall street feels assured of a lessening of the international tension. Yesterday's general buying movement was resumed with undiminished vigor, some of the more active specialties rising from 1 to over 2 points, while investment shares responded in moderate measure.

Mercantile Marine preferred, yesterday's leader, rose 2 1/2 to 83, with a point gain for the common. Other foremost features included United States and Lackawanna Steels, Mexicans, the zinc and copper groups and motors. Baltimore & Ohio led the rails with an advance of 1 1/4.

Activity quickened on the confident absorption of offerings and prices kept pace with the increased dealings, the turnover of the morning exceeding half a million shares. An unusual variety of rumors contributed to the advance, which was the most impressive of several weeks.

Reports were current that Berlin had acceded to the more important demands of this government and the course of United States Steel, which added materially to yesterday's recovery, pointed strongly to an extraordinary dividend at today's meeting of the directors.

Various war shares and specialties were higher by 3 to 6 points, with 10 for Bethlehem Steel at 439. A slight recession from best prices occurred before midday.

Bonds were strong.

MANY OBSTACLES MET IN PURSUIT OF MOONSHINERS

Violators Are Not Usually Dangerous, But Are Cunning.

If Unable to Escape When Raided, Money Loss Is Trifling

The mountains of Tennessee, North Carolina, Virginia and Kentucky are full of illicit distillers of whiskey. Their stills usually are located in ravines and almost inaccessible save to those acquainted with the surrounding mountains, their primitive roads and rough passes; so there is a strenuous game of hide and seek between the distillers and the revenue officers.

If officers locate or suspect the location of an illicit still, their approach is known generally when they are miles distant. Nearly every man, woman and child in the district is a "lookout." Suspicious strangers pass an innocent looking mountaineer, who seemingly is chopping wood or squirrel hunting, and he passes along the word. A woman may be drawing water from a spring, or a boy or girl coming from school, and by underground wire flashes, "Revenue officers!" Quickly a certain number of shots will be fired, or seemingly a dog will bark in a peculiar manner. The "wireless" is on its way and the alarm will be carried for miles.

When night comes on a rocket may be fired from a prominent ridge or elevation, a lantern waved, the loud hoot of an owl or the note of a whippoorwill sounded or the twinkling of a light shown from a distant cabin window, and in a few minutes everybody in any way interested is wise to the fact that officers are in the vicinity.

Difficulty of Pursuit.
The "moonshiners" by a short cut save miles of rough traveling over which the revenue officers hate to trudge. When they reach the suspected location, the still has vanished. With such a system the officers are "up against it." Their work is even more difficult in winter, because the hardy mountaineers are perfectly at home in the deepest snow and the coldest weather.

Several days before the liquor is to be distilled a location is prepared, the cornmeal and barrel are carried there on the "moonshiners' shoulders and the mash is mixed for fermentation. The still is not taken in at this time, nor does any one approach the spot until the time needed for the meal to ferment has passed. Then, at night, the still is carried in, and before daylight several "runs" are made. If there is the slightest suspicion that revenue officers are in the vicinity the still is carried out and, most likely, will be put in operation in some neighboring ravine next night.

Cheap and Portable.
Illicit distilling is sometimes carried on for weeks in a very secluded place. Cheap, portable stills are in general use, for when the revenue officers capture one it is destroyed, regardless of size and cost, and every drop of the liquor and "beer"—fermented meal before distillation—is spilled.

Often a number of stills are in operation in the same district. The cheapest one is left for the revenue men to find easily, so that, thinking their work done, they may leave the others to run. The officers have discovered this trick, but as often as they learn the ruse, the resourceful "moonshiners" invent another.

Occasionally liquor is made in the homes, generally in a basement or cellar, so arranged that the smoke from the furnace arises from the chimney of the house. But this is growing less frequent; it is more risky; there is no chance for the householder to deny ownership of the still.

"Mean Liquor."
The old-fashioned still and worm process, by which pure liquor can only be made, has fallen into disuse. In the scramble to escape the revenue officers, any improvised stills are used, some of them made from milk cans or gasoline tanks. No wonder that the "whiskey" thus distilled is known as "mean liquor." To make it meaner and more biting the meal is adulterated with lye, plug tobacco and other such ingredients, so that a bushel of meal yields more than its proper quantum.

A mistaken idea is prevalent that the moonshiners are a dangerous class, willing to risk death rather than capture; but generally speaking they submit quietly to capture and made sure to avoid injury to the officers or attempt to kill them, as they realize that this means only a longer prison sentence, if not death. Under a new law every man found at an illicit still can be captured and is chased as a "blockader," even though he has no interest in the outfit, and may be only a customer.

A Foot Race.
The moonshiners, instead of resisting the officers, prepare one avenue of escape which is used in every instance, unless they are taken by complete surprise. They know that the officers have no authority to shoot them and that the shots are only a bluff, so it becomes a foot race. They have previously obstructed the line of their retreat with brush, logs and rocks designed to retard the officers.

Moonshiners sometimes start for est fires to protect themselves from discovery, because oftentimes revenue officers locate stills by the smoke, even at a distance of many miles. So, with the mountains on fire and the air filled with smoke the moonshiners are safe from detection by the stills from their furnaces.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

If Mixed With Sulphur It Darkens So Naturally, Nobody Can Tell.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good, even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" for about 50 cents a bottle. It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful cure for those who desire a more youthful

JEWS PLACED UPON LAND IN RUSSIA

Germans Are Aiding Refugees in Poland to Raise Their Crops.

BREST-LITOVSK, Russia, April 25.—For almost the first time in history the Jews of this district have an opportunity to show whether or not they can become agriculturalists. When the Russians evacuated this city and set it on fire they took with them many thousands of the Jewish population. Great numbers died, kept on ahead of the retreating Russians, and still others hid in the woods and then, penniless and hungry, streamed back into Brest-Litovsk again.

For a time the Germans attempted to house them in the ruined city. But they have all now been sent out to abandoned farms, where their work is regularly inspected by German officials. Every possible assistance is given them in the hope they may raise good crops and do their share toward helping out the need in Poland. The land in this section is fertile, and with proper cultivation and care should bear a big crop.

The city of Brest-Litovsk itself still remains the next thing to a city of the dead. Five-sixths or three-fourths of its houses are nothing but gaping walls within which stand only the remains of the remarkable Russian stoves which stand even after the chimneys crumble and fall.

The Germans stationed in Brest have done wonders in cleaning up the city. Each ruined house has been thoroughly gone over. The debris has been removed or neatly piled up, and each object not utterly destroyed by fire and which is still usable in one way or another has been rescued.

The forts, which the Russians blew up with dynamite and which were valued at three hundred million francs (approximately $60,000,000) are still heaps of cement and stone, broken and crumbling. There is no activity discernible that would indicate that the Germans are attempting to restore the fortifications for their own purposes.
